Fall Fest, Tradition But Unique

"For the Beauty of the Earth" was the theme for the 1982 Fall Fest, which was held October 1-3. It originated from Psalm 19:1, which states, "The Heavens are telling the glory of God and the firmament proclaims His handiwork."

This theme was illustrated to represent the Fest (see below) by Carolyn Goertzen Wedel.

The 1982 Fall Fest continued the traditions of the Fall Fair, Almost Anything Goes Contest, Chicken Barbecue, Homecoming football game and Sunday Morning Worship Service.

Unique to this year's Fest was the play The Blowing and the Bending written by Bethel's Jim Juhnke and Harold Moyer.

Student Nursing

The Program Is All Time Consuming

Dedication and a deep commitment to the field are the words Julie Quiring, Nursing Professor used to describe just a few of the attributes needed to be a nursing major at Bethel.

The nursing program, graduating its second class this year, has already established its name as an excellent program. Quiring stated her own opinion concerning the departments excellence. "In our program, we are looking at the whole person. Within the person you must take into account the physical, personal, social, mental, and spiritual. We encourage our students to look at the person in context."

The nursing majors go through rigorous study and training to do just that. The freshman and sophomore years are primarily concerned with general education requirements.

It is the junior year which marks the beginning of the intense work and determination. During the first semester of that year, students get an introduction in, and become efficient in the basic skills. Quiring defined such skills as giving shots, removing stitches, bed baths, assessment of the body, suction, and a variety of other skills. The majority of the day is spent in "clinical" or in actual laboratory situations.

The second semester of the year has an emphasis on maternity and child care. Each student is assigned an expectant mother and her family. The assignment is to interact with the family through labor and postnatal care. Quiring commented, "That second semester is one of the students favorites. The nurses can relate to the parents and reflect on their own future as possible parents. They usually see the delivery as such a miraculous experience." Leanna Voth, nursing student echoed her by adding, "One of my most rewarding experiences was being present at the birth of a baby. The all important phone call came at 1:30 in the morning and I was at the hospital until 3:00 the next afternoon. I've never been so exhausted or awestruck in my whole life. I came home and cried tears of joy at the wonder of it all."

While the junior class deals primarily with birth, and the beginning of life, the seniors begin their year with those in the last part of life, the older adult. Each student spends time in a nursing home, working alongside other retirement home nurses. Another requirement of the first semester is work in the community. Students may work in schools, county health departments, or family planning centers. The second semester follows with emphasis on nursing management. Jennifer Baughman explained the program by saying, "In this area of study we are involved in experiences which expose us to the responsibilities of the charge nurses. Towards the end of the program, we are actually put in charge of a floor." Quiring added, "The students work in a team leader experience. They gain an idea of what it's like to be a supervisor." Many student nurses express this opportunity as a pinnacle of their experiences.

There is an exceptional amount of work leading up to that point however. According to Baughman, "The program is all time consuming. You need to be totally dedicated to the work. Many times I felt almost guilty socializing with others because I knew nursing needed so much more time than I was giving it." Vernita Voth agreed with her, "The study load has often seemed overwhelming. However the knowledge I gain in school may mean the difference between life and death for someone someday."

Many student nurses stressed the point that the instructors are very helpful in encouraging them in the program. Julie Redinger stated, "I believe the instructors have faith in us and they have taken a personal interest in knowing how each of us is doing." Voth echoed her in saying, "Our instructors have such high hopes for us. Sometimes it seems we could never live up to them, but on the job, it's nice to find that we have high expectations of ourselves as well, and we can reach our goals." Voth added "Their Christian attitudes and values come shining through and it is great to have such wonderful role models when I'm struggling to figure out just exactly what a nurse is and what he or she does."

Memories are many for those who graduate from Bethel with a nursing degree this year, but perhaps Vernita Voth summed up the thoughts of all the students in saying, "When I'm old and gray in my rocking chair someday, I'll remember my classmates. I'll remember the closeness we've developed, and the caring concern we have for each other. We've grown close because we've experienced so many things together, things no one else would ever understand . . I'll remember that when we were in the thick of things we were still able to have fun . . . we laughed, and we cried together, but we have lasting memories."

Fall Plays Strongly Tied to Bethel

The Blowing and the Bending

History often seems to repeat itself. Issues that were important during one time period reoccur in different forms during another. Conscientiousness and military participation is one such issue.

It was appropriate that The Blowing and the Bending was presented during the 1982 Fall Festival. It worked as a mirror to reflect the ideas of 1918 in relation to the present conflict of nonregistration.

As James Juhnke noted, "Some of the underlying issues of World War I remain alive in 1982. May the blowing and the bending make the oak tree strong!"

Written by Juhnke and J. Harold Moyer, the play portrays the conflict between the Kansas Mennonites and World War I issues.

The Blowing and the Bending captures the controversy of military conscription, anti-German propaganda and war bonds.

The drama and music departments teamed up to present the musical. Both Marles Preheim and Arlo Kasper directed in their respective fields of music and stage.

The production involved over 100 members of the Bethel and Newton communities. The major roles were played by Dave Deutschendorf, Solomon; Sharla Kaufman, Sarah; Bruce Toews, Menno; Wendell Funk, Carl; Jeanette Voran, Bessie; Seichi Matsuda, Jeff; and Ron Brunk, Abner Schmidt.

Arsenic and Old Lace

Arsenic and Old Lace was the second play presented in 1982 that had connections with Bethel College. While The Blowing and the Bending has a more direct tie through the Mennonite tradition and its contemporary authors, Arsenic and Old Lace's link is more subtle.

Joseph Kesselring, who authored the play lived in Goerz Hall and taught voice at Bethel from 1923 through 1925. Since Kesselring was familiar with the community, it is assumed that he incorporated various people and landmarks in his comedy.

Robert Clack, director, stated, "People in the community were possibly prototypes for the aunts." In addition, Arlo Kasper noticed that there were "many similarities" between Goerz Hall and the original set design.

A unique angle was added to the Bethel production by 4'2" Dawn Abrahams. She along with Amy Friesen played the two aunts. This casting of varied heights added a new interpretation to the play.

Other major cast members were Mark Weaver, Mortimer; Lance Carithers, Teddy; Mark Block, Jonathan; and Janice Frey, Elaine.

A CAST OF THOUSANDS — Sitting down to the harvest meal are the numerous participants in the drama The Blowing and the Bending. The cast, one of the largest in Bethel history, included students, faculty, staff, and various children from the community.

Nonregistration

Government and Military Responsibility vs Beliefs and Morals

Cameras flashed; the reporters flocked; and the students came alive. The scene was slightly reminiscent of the anti-war demonstrations of the 60's. The occasion was the indictment of two Bethel students for failure to register for the draft.

Kendal Warkentine, a senior from North Newton, Kansas, and Chuck Epp, a junior from Henderson, Nebraska, were the ninth and tenth nonregistrants to be indicted in the United States. Warkentine and Epp are two of a number of nonregistrants on campus. They feel that the government is using them as examples to intimidate the other 800,000 men to register.

The student body burst into action at the news of the indictments. Prayer meetings were held and support groups followed the court proceedings. Support was not unanimous among the students. As with any controversial stance, there are people who disagree.

After the initial shock of the indictments wore off, Warkentine and Epp began planning their defense. In many ways the two have the same basis for their decision, yet they approach their charges from different actions. Warkentine originally planned to plead "no contest" and later changed his plea to "guilty." Epp, on the other hand, pled "not guilty" and plans to fight his charge on moral and religious grounds.

Warkentine wanted to plead "no contest" because according to his conscience he did nothing wrong, but he admits that he broke a law. The court refused to accept his plea. Consequently, Warkentine became the first nonregistrant to plead "guilty."

The incentive for Warkentine's plea came from the Bible. He cites Acts 5:29, "We must obey God rather than men" (NEB), and Romans 13:1, "Every person must submit to the supreme authorities" (NEB) as a basis for his decision.

In essence, Warkentine refused to register according to the law because he found such an action contrary to his understanding of the Bible. However, Warkentine also submits to the power of the U.S. government and the laws it establishes.

Epp plans to contest the validity of the law itself. Epp's religious convictions were the basis for his nonregistrant stance. However, he sees this issue as a chance to communicate to others, outside the Mennonite faith, that humans can live peaceably.

Through his trial Epp hopes to reveal inconsistencies within the law which will nullify its authority. A favorable decision for Epp would satisfy his philosophy that no one should be forced to fight in a war — even if they do not have strong religious convictions.

The actions of these young men and others have once again raised the question of responsibility to the government and the military for the Bethel community. No one has the perfect answer, but the events have caused the students to examine their beliefs and morals.

Christmas Fest

In True Olde English Style

As the guests entered the hall they were greeted by the trumpet heralds. The lord and lady of the house reigned as the festivities began. The jester amused as the minstrel and madrigals entertained.

The feast was thoroughly presented in congruence with its medieval theme. The language, the music, the humor, the dinner and the entertainment were all in Olde English style.

Because of this, it seemed as though the evenings took place in medieval England. It was, however, the annual Christmas Fest.

Dean and Mrs. Hinshaw and President and Mrs. Schultz alternately served as the lord and lady of the house. The minstrel, Mark Block, serenaded the guests, as did the brass quintet, Paul Rudy, Paul Schrag, Nan Goering, Jeff Baumgartner and Russ Coon. Characteristically the jester, Dawn Abrahams, stole the show.

The evening was brought to a true medieval close by the presentation of The Second Shepherd's Play. Directed by Arlo Kasper, the cast included Bruce Armin, Steve Stayrook, Earl Parrish, Michael Pankratz, Marty Miller, Eric Gale, Larry Potter, Eric Unrau, Marilyn Peters and Joel Goertz.

The play was unique in that the language was Olde English and large puppets were utilized to further the symbolism.

As is tradition, the Fest was closed by everyone singing "Joy to the World."

Readers Theatre

Change of Pace, Lots of Work, Challenging

Just say the words, "Readers Theatre" and its participants reply with a variety of responses. They may include, "a change of pace," "enjoyable," "lots of work," "interesting," and even "challenging."

Throughout the first semester seven different groups were formed providing entertainment for many clubs, banquets, churches, and children. Of course each student involved in Readers Theatre had their own preference concerning their favorite type of program. Tim Wall explained, "I prefer the comedy program. People always seem to be more responsive to funny scripts. The humorous scripts are easier to give." Lori Schultz based her preference on the audience. "I prefer either banquets or group meetings and I definitely enjoy a younger crowd for an audience!"

Audiences first viewed a Readers Theatre group twelve years ago when the class was first offered. The class was first taught, and is still being directed by Ada Mae Haury. According to Haury, the groups originally did very few community programs. As she relinquished her role in the Bethel Forensics program, she became more involved with the group. Readers Theatre gradually grew to be a popular credit course for students. However the popularity was not exclusively with the students, for community interest grew as well. Haury stated that all together the groups did an average of 50 programs per semester.

The variety of programs the group presents is only one reason why students choose to take the class. According to Jeanette Voran, "It is a program that not every other college has, and it provides a unique opportunity for people to get involved in drama, get to know people, and also travel around." Allen Jantz selected the class for another reason. "Readers Theatre interested me in the way that drama interested me. It was however, more accessable to me with no auditions or anything like that." Lisa Janzen added, "I keep taking it each semester because I like (and need) a change of pace. My group has lots of fun!"

These "fun" experiences are especially evident in the groups performances. Although often it is the more embarassing situations which are most memorable. Scott Funk recalls, "My pants split down the middle during a performance. I had to finish the program with a coat around my waist." Tammy Duvanel tells of a time when her group gave a program for a Future Farmers of America banquet. According to Duvanel, "The event was a pig roast. We went in overalls and flannel shirts, hats and boots, and wouldn't you know it, they were all dressed in suits and ties? We really had a blast."

But why else would the students who participate in Readers Theatre go through the practices, hard work, traveling, cutting of scripts and the programs? Lisa Janzen said, "We get to laugh at the scripts too, and sometimes our reaction to a script the first few times we read it makes it a classic for us and makes it fun to perform." The enjoyment Readers Theatre provides to the students, as well as the audiences makes it all worthwhile.

A SERIOUS SIDE — Readers Theatre can express many different moods. Here, AllenJantz, Marty Miller, Lisa Janzen, Lori Schultz and Brian Preheim communicate a more somber script.

Interterm on Campus

Not So Dull Afterall

Characteristically, it is the off-campus interterm activities that seem to get all the glory. Students and professors alike buzzed excitedly about studying in California, London, Germany and even visiting other campuses. However, once one mentioned that Bethel College was home for January, a deaf ear seemed to be turned.

The fact that on-campus interterm activities were interesting was ignored once more this past year.

If the truth should be known, the 1983 interterm on campus held unique and interesting opportunities.

Students had a chance to broaden their experience in watercolor, human genetics, photography and modern musicals, among others.

One of the more demanding courses was Home Management. According to the syllabus the course lasted from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. It involved labs, task analyses, interviews and oral reports. Suzanne Dirks said of the class, "It was a lot of work. But, one of the most challenging and fun projects was planning a meal for less than a dollar."

In the modern musicals course, students not only learned through the methods of a normal academic course, but they experientially learned through Man of La Mancha. Kimberly Schmidt summed up the course with, "The course was designed to involve the student in not only all areas of production and performance, but we also studied the different elements which work together to create a good show."

Visual Communication in Black and White offered several different aspects of photography. Students completed assignments in motion, portrait work and special effects. Several results from the course can be found throughout this publication.

And of course, there was the now extinct Capstone. During Interterm, it hit an all time high with an enrollment of 110. Capstone was of a different texture this year. It was the last "Capstone" and therefore thematically leaned toward its successor "World Problems." Jude Martin said of the class, "The professors pretty successfully blended political science, economics and international development. We had unusually high quality guest speakers and gained a unique insight into Guat emala because of Dr. Hurtado."

Other than the courses themselves, various other activities took place. Students had chances to go roller skating, view a play at Crown Uptown and take in a concert of the Wichita Symphony.

Calling Bethel College home for the January of 1983 was not so dull after all.

Student Teachers Face the Real World

Will Always Remember the Headaches

Many elementary school children may think their teachers are simply born in front of a chalkboard, or with a red pen in their hands, however the Elementary Education majors who are student teaching this year know differently.

After all the required courses and methods classes are completed, it is time to get out into the "real world." Lorene Goering, Education professor, stresses the importance of the experience in saying, "Student teaching is a culmination of everything the students have learned thus far. It is the time when theory and practice come together."

Many students felt that first day at school was not quite as bad as they thought it might be. Goering stated that the students positive attitude in their new roles was probably due to all the practice lessons they were able to teach in their methods classes. "Those experiences, or smaller steps leading up to student teaching are so valuable." Dana Selzer, student teacher voiced similar views. "The time I've spent observing and teaching for various methods classes has paid off. A classroom feels comfortable to me."

That first teaching experience might not have been traumatic, but all the student teachers agreed it was exhausting. After the first few days of classes Terri Gaeddert exclaimed, "Today I can say "TGIF" and really mean it! It's amazing how being here just in the mornings seems to wear me out! I look back on the first week with an "it's been good" feeling and a sigh of relief." Gail Decker added, "I am really tired some-days, and yet I'm impressed with the amount of work and responsibility a teacher has to deal with each day. Maybe you eventually take it all in stride." Beatty Robb continued, "I think the public should come out one day to the school and see all the responsibilities a teacher has!"

All student teachers agreed that the rewards out-numbered the tough times. Judy Reimer learned how quick thinking can turn a difficult situation into a learn-ing experience . . . for her, as well as for her class. Reimer explained, "The lesson went well in spite of the disruption. A desk broke during a math lesson. I propped it up with a chair and then included it in our counting activity. "How many broken desks do we have? and they all chimed, One!"

A highlight of Lynne Watts' student teaching experi-ences was an assignment her cooperating teacher gave to the class. Watts explained, "The fifth graders were asked to package a raw egg so it would survive a 38-foot drop from the top of the school building! It was quite an experience as the children opened their con-tainers to determine the results." One of Decker's experiences was just as memorable, but perhaps not quite as enjoyable. "I was on my second day of play-ground duty when a kindergartener came running up to me with blood running down his face. I must have panicked for a minute, because I actually had to ask him where the nurses office was. We went there and got ice for his forehead. While we waited for his mother to come we talked informally. He told me it was only his ninth day of school! I wanted to say back to him, in an equally waining voice, 'It is only my ninth day of school too.' But of course I couldn't. I think we kind of felt equally distressed."

Others shared memorable experiences. Gaeddert will surely never forget the mile she ran every morning with her students. Robb will remember her concern over a slower student. Carol Williamson will never forget the time, early in her student teaching experi-ence when she was left in charge of the class.

And of course all will remember the headaches, the occasional "grouch" days, and the tiredness. But eventually those memories will fade, and what will remain is the lasting impressions of a valuable learning experience.

FIRST STEP — Russell Goering gained experience with older students at Newton's First Step program.

Man of La Mancha

Challenges and Memories

Man of La Mancha is a show "about Cervantes and what this experience, the playing of Don Quixote, does for him, and the effect it has upon his fellow prisoners, in a wider sense upon all his fellowmen," Arlo Kasper summarized.

The musical is about Miguel de Cervantes, Arlo Kasper, who is imprisoned because he has foreclosed on a church. While awaiting his trial, Cervantes is forced to defend himself to his fellow prisoners.

Cervantes' defense takes the form of a tale about Quixote, in which the other prisoners participate. Aldonza, Kathy Kasper; Sancho, Mark Block; the Housekeeper, Marilyn Peters; the Padre, Kim Krahn; the Governor, Bob Clack, the Innkeeper's Wife, Angela Tatro; and the barber, Mike Shima were the main characters who participated. The show was done by a visiting director, Bill Meyers.

The musical proved challenging in many ways. It seems that each character had his or her difficulties. Block said that "trying to think fat and stupid" was hard for him. Kathy Kasper responded that "playing a woman of questionable repute opposite students who were much younger" than she was a difficult aspect.

As the difficulties fade with time, some memories will always linger. Neither Block nor Kimberly Schmidt will forget opening night when he pulled on her skirt and it fell off. Schmidt screamed and frantically tried to salvage her garment. Block struggled against laughter, and stayed in character. Kathy Kasper cited her wig, the "rat's nest," as a long term memory. And tragically, one memory that will remain with the show, is choreographer Anette Whillock's accident. While demonstrating a piece to the cast, she jumped through the open trap door and fell from the stage to the basement. This was a sobering moment for all present.

All in all, those who participated,enjoyed the show.

ANTIGONE

a Greek tragedy a modern play

Antigone followed the spring drama tradition of focusing on justice values. Kimberly Schmidt, who played the modern Antigone, said, "Her Antigone's, ideas about reality and the duty each person has towards upholding ideals presented problems because they bordered on the extreme . . . this extends back to her existential philosophy."

There seemed to be conflict throughout the play; if now between individuals within Antigone herself.

The play was presented with a double cast. The first was a Sophoclean version and the second a modern one. The leading roles were respectively held by Lance Carrithers, Creon; Cindy Neufeld, Antigone; and Seichi Mansuda, Creon; Kimberly Schmidt, Antigone.

While Schmidt found difficulty with the philosophy of her character, the Sophoclean actors dealt with depth and intensity problems. This was largely due to the foreign nature of Greek tragedy, although presenting the two versions back to back was helpful.

Antigone did present a strong message to the few who attended. Cindy Neufeld understandably stated, "This type of play is great experience for the actors, but it doesn't draw large crowds."

SCAN
one of a kind

SCAN, the Student Community Action Network, is an organizational team consisting of student volunteers who participate in community agencies and projects including MCC and Prisoner Visitation at KSIR. They also plan and execute projects such as the biannual, on-campus bloodmobile.

The bloodmobile is scheduled once in the fall and once in the spring and is actually a way to give students a chance to donate blood without the inconvenience, which might otherwise deter them, of taking two to three hours to do so off campus. SCAN usually sets up a table in the Student Activity Center to publicize and pull in volunteers for both giving blood and helping with the process. The 1983 (spring) goal was a hundred volunteers and SCAN almost met their goal with a final total of 97.

Another project SCAN is involved in organizing is Big Brothers/Big Sisters. Students usually spend two to three hours per week with a child who is from four to twelve years old and from a broken home or economically disadvantaged family. The goal is for the student to provide the child with an image of a big brother or sister which they might not otherwise have.

Two big group activities, including all the big brothers and sisters and their little brothers and sisters, in the 1982 1983 college year, were the Christmas party and bowling party.

SCAN was also in its second year of an adult-level contact program also. It is a "Man to Man" prisoner visitation program designed to provide inmates at KSIR in Salina with an outside contact person. Mainly it is meant to give the inmates some variety because they have no regular visitors.

In 1982 Harold Regier initiated contact with Bethel and suggested college student integration into this community program. At this point it was restricted to male students, however, one female, Jude Martin, did participate.

Although it is frustrating for SCAN team members to think that not everyone knows who or what SCAN is, Jenny Siefers said that there has been a considerable increase in the use of the SCAN car. "I think this is terrific. It shows that things are getting done and people are more willing to volunteer if they know they have transportation."

Generally, students who want to work with SCAN can choose the age group they feel most comfortable with. The elderly, teenagers, grade school children and preschoolers, as well as mentally and emotionally disabled or ill are all possibilities for volunteers.

Jenny Siefers, the 1982-83 senior team member, said the importance of the Network lies in two areas, "A lot needs to be done in the community and agencies sometimes don't have the resources to do it. It doesn't take much of a student's time to help out," she continued. "It is a great opportunity to help others without necessarily joining V.S., and it provides students with a way to interact with the community."

SCAN, a privately funded organization, is not something to be found on every college campus. In fact it may be the only one of its kind.

the one acts

a chance to try directing wings

"All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players," wrote Shakespeare in one of his plays. That was not the case for some actors at Bethel College.

Members of the Play Production and Direction class taught by Arlo Kasper were all actors that the Bethel community had become quite familiar with on stage. However, they tried their hand at directing.

Amy Friesen, senior; Lance Carrithers, senior; Dawn Abrahams, junior; Angela Tatro, junior; and Earl Parrish, junior learned various techniques of directing and analyzing their scripts. The test of their abilities came with the performance of their plays.

After their directing experience was nearly completed, the students commented on the techniques they learned. Tatro commented that this had been "an opportunity that all of us have waited for. You learn by trying your wings. You see what works with people and what doesn't."

Carrithers agreed that he "learned to deal with people. You don't learn drama or theater or how to be creative. I look at directing as relating, like a mother, father, or philsopher. Oh sure, there's creativity involved, but it's more relational."

Learning from other directors was also part of the class. Many of these students were cast in classmates' plays. Friesen said, "I think up ideas for my own use by seeing what others do. sometimes you say, 'Oh, I'd never make my actors do that,' or 'I'll have to remember to try that with my cast sometime.' "

Friesen also found help in class when they would talk over their problems or bring in their cast to do acting exercises.

According to Parrish, "What we have learned is understanding of what needs to be done with the play. We can do anything with the play that we want to, but we need to understand what the playwright wants the director to do."

THE CONSUL

a tradition breaker

William Lovejoy

The drama and music departments, in a combined effort, created Bethel history in the Spring of 1983. Tradition was broken, and a tragic opera was presented.

Mennoti's The Consul was described by director Bob Clack as a "story of oppression and bureaucracy, of the shunting aside of the needs of an individual by the laws of the state."

Magda Sorel, Kathy Kasper, becomes increasingly frustrated as the plot progresses. She attempts to obtain a visa so that she may join John, her husband, played by William Schmidt.

She must endure the repression of the Consul's secretary and those also waiting for visas. In the remaining scenes, Magda faces depression at home. Her child dies, as does John's mother, Marilyn Peters. The opera climaxes when Magda, in an attempt to save her husband and his comrades, commits suicide.

The depressive nature of the play had its toll upon the actors. Kaye Waltner, the Consul's secretary said, "I got very tired of being the villain. It started effecting my own character, my real self, during the production week."

Sandy Nickel, Vera Boronel, also felt certain effects. Nickel said, "During the opera, I felt that I was continually waiting, I was tense and nervous. The day after the last production. I went to the doctor's office and was kept waiting for over an hour. I started to get nervous and tense just like before. It was the Consul's office all over again."

The oppression of The Consul should not be dwelled upon. It has several positive factors. It offered a musical challenge to both actors and accompanist, and confronted the audience with a somewhat foreign alternative, to mention two.

Those in the cast not yet mentioned were James Schrag, The Secret Police Agent; Sharla Kaufman, The Foreign Woman; Rikki Godshall, Mr. Kofner; Janice Frey, Anna Gomez; Lynn Preheim, The Magician; Bruce Toews, Assan, and Seiichi Matsuda, The Plain Clothesman. The music direction was by Walter Jost. The accompanist was Sonya Wedel.

Waltner probably summed up the cast's feeling with, "It all fell into place a lot better than I thought it would two weeks before the show. Overall, I felt that the opera was a real success.

Social Workers do it in the field

Several senior Bethel social work majors completed their field placement this past year. They each chose placement in a community service operation according to their interests and were expected to fulfill a position including case loads and all of the responsibilities they will be expected to handle in an employed position after graduation.

It seems that most of these students decided upon a career in social work early in their education. Many cited family background as a big influence, like Lisa Loeffler who said, "I grew up with parents involved in the mental health field. It was very interesting to me. When I took my first class, it felt right." Jane Voth started classes directed to an art major but decided she "wanted to get into something more people oriented." She continued to say that she was encouraged to go into counseling because it was "in tune with my Christian beliefs."

Jenny Seifers, who has been a social work major for all four years, said, "I always knew I wanted to do it. In sixth grade I decided I wanted to help people." Jude Martin transferred to Bethel in September of 1980 and has been in the social work program for three years. She took longer than most of the other students in the program to decide what she wanted to do, but refers to her Mennonite background and her parents' people-oriented careers as contributing to her decision.

Patt Warders, also involved in the program all four years, wanted to "work with people and especially children." Shelly Adam said that many things contributed to her decision to go into social work. "I am especially interested in counseling and working with high school students whose parents are divorced." Randy Goering, graduated at the end of the fall 1982 semester. He was a returning student at the time.

The interests expressed by these students mainly influenced the type of work and where they did their field placement. As a result, the placement program was helpful in a variety of areas.

Jude Martin worked at the Axtell Christian Hospital for 30 hours per week. She had a case load and was mainly responsible for placing people in nursing homes and working with people with chronic illnesses and their families. At the Social Rehabilitation Services (SRS) in El Dorado, Shelly Adam was placed in a counseling area. She remembers one incident, "When I was first there I was supposed to get a view of the whole operation so I sat in on some income maintenance sessions pretending to be a client. That turned out kind of embarrassing when some people from the community came in and I knew them."

Patt Warders' field placement included a position at the Kansas Children's Service League where she screened foster parent families, the children to go to them and the natural parents of the children. Although Pat has had a few unpleasant experiences, she still wants to "find something along that line after graduation."

One of the most strenuous field placement studies was that of Lisa Loeffler who maintained a position at the McPherson Community Mental Health Services for over 400 hours in a ten-week period. "I had a few cases of my own and I helped with divorce education," she said. "I want to be in the mental health field. Sometime I'm planning to go to grad school and specialize in it." After her field placement experience Lisa said, "Social work didn't make a whole lot of sense before field placement. I never realized how good my classes were!"

Jenny Seifers worked at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital and Bethel Home for the Aged for her field placement training. Her main responsibilities included working with patients and their families to help them deal with the patients' illnesses. She listened to concerns and fears and made herself available to work through problems with the family. One unique experience for her happened when "at the Home a confused lady asked if I was a boy or a girl. I had to delicately explain that I was not an inpatient but a volunteer and a girl. I even had on a dress!"

Jane Voth was placed at SRS in Newton, where she worked with a case load and gained a feel for all areas involved in the center. Jane had quite a bit of experience previously in socially centered activities, including helping in a preschool and working as a camp counselor. When faced with a difficult situation during her field placement at SRS, she said she was surprised at her reaction. "You learn it all in class but then there you are and it's amazing! It works! All the things you learned in class really help," she said, laughing.

The field placement program, for these students, was a wonderful success. Many were surprised at how much they had learned in class, and how much poise and coping ability they had when faced with a tough situation. It was an encouraging, eye-opening experience for all; one they will not forget easily.

ACHIEVEMENT
Awards
baccalaureate degrees
bethel honor society

At each college year's end comes the awarding of achievement. Spring ushers in the Thresher Award, the baccalaureate degree, membership in the Bethel Honor Society, and ushers out, in this year's case, 136 graduates.

The class of '83, which was the largest in Bethel history, was comprised of 71 women and 56 men totaling 127 individuals who received the baccalaureate degree; seven women and two men totaling nine persons who received the associated of arts degree; and three men and one woman who received both the AA and BA/BS degree. This came to a complete total of 136 graduates, receiving 140 degrees. The graduates came from diverse geographical areas. They represented 19 states as well as Canada, Zaire, Ethiopia, Germany, India and Saudi Arabia.

The majors of Nursing and Economics and Business Administration held the most graduates, totaling 18 each. Elementary Education followed with 17, Industrial Arts with 10, Social Work with nine, Biology with eight, Art with seven and Psychology with six. Of the Associate of Arts degrees, seven were in secretarial studies and six in Agriculture.

All of these statistics seem quite formal. The graduate's perspective however, is more down to earth. Matthew Gilmore said of graduation, "It doesn't feel any different. After working on exams, graduation seemed anticlimactic." Karolyn Graber's attitude seemed to be along the same line. When she was interviewed the Monday following graduation, she said, "Right now I was outside washing the car just like any other person. You don't need a college diploma to do that."

Of course the 25 individuals continuing with graduate study did not view Bethel graduation as the usual milestone. The aniticipation of further research, practicum and exams put a damper on the celebration.

One would have expected that the various awards conferred upon individuals would have added exultation to the end of the year. This is not necessarily true, however. The awards seemed to have an ambiguous effect.

Heidi Regier, who received a Thresher Award in Bible and Religion said, "It's an honor, it's an affirmation and it feels good. But, I also think that there are others as qualified. I tend to feel uncomfortable being pulled out and awarded things."

Uncertainty about the awards is justified. Many a student has sat through the awards convocation and wondered, "How is one chosen for a Thresher?", "Why do certain departments present awards while others don't.", and "Why didn't they have a Thresher award in History? They did last year."

The answers to these questions are somewhat ambigous. Sometimes the Thresher is awarded for a certain body of work, while at other times it is given for work done over the four year college term. In some cases the department may choose the award. But, in other cases an outside source may be the judge. Departments may choose not to present the award because of a lack of student distinction, or merely because they are unorganized and do not begin the process in time.

Bob Regier said, "I have some question about the meaning of the Thresher Award and what it represents. The standards are so diverse . . . It's a chance for a department to get its moment in the sun at the awards convocation. But, that's not worth doing it."

There are some that value highly the award, however, a recipient of a Thresher, Lance Carrithers said, "In forensics, especially, after four years you receive trophies. But trophies are just that: trophies. The Thresher is a recognition here on campus . . . of a job well done."

Thus is appears that feelings concerning awards vary considerably. However they viewed the award, those receiving Thresher Awards for 1983 were Heidi Regier in Bible and Religion, Amy Louise Friesen in Drama, Galen Hofer in Industrial Arts, William Schmidt in Music, LeAnna Voth in Nursing, Mark Springer in Natural Science, Lance Carrithers in Speech/Communications and Connie Regier in Home Economics.

Other awards included The Wall Street Journal Award, Robin Flickinger; Newton Chamber of Commerce Award, Mike Wedel; Outstanding Mennonite Contribution Award: Barry Bartel, Jim Schmidt, Kendal Warkentine; and the C. Henry Smith Oratorical Contest: first place to Galen Seymour, second place to Paul Schrag.

Admittance to the Bethel Honor Society is one recognition that has little controversy surrounding it. It is generally accepted that the Honor Society represents the highest graduation honor. As Bob Regier put it, it represents the "cream of Academic achievement." The following 1983 graduates were selected for membership in the society: Jennifer Dyck, Robin Flickinger, Terri Gaeddert, Karolyn Graber, Dave Kliewer, Ronald Klippenstein, Marvin Kym, Galen Quenzer, Heidi Regier, Judith Reimer, Mark Rich, James Schmidt, Dana Selzer and Mark Springer.

Judy Reimer said that "it was exciting to get it (the membership)" and especially since it "was the first year Education majors were admitted to the Honor Society." Karolyn Graber summed up her feelings in a way that could apply to any graduate, "It felt like an honor and my parents were very proud of me."

The Harvest

Within a college campus, students face the possibility of becoming lost in the crowd. However, Bethel students are recognized for their individual worth. Like a sea of wheat that would be impossible without each stalk, so would Bethel be an impossibility without the uniqueness of each person. Together the individuals manifest themselves in the harvest.

EXPLORING THE FAR EAST — Professor Huang shares a new perspective on his home land with onlooking students.

Exchange Program Brings Chinese Professor to Campus

Visiting the Bethel Campus this past year, and adding much to the community's cultural experience, was Professor Huang Xinqu ("Shin-tchu"), a native of China, where he is also employed as a university professor. Possessing a very warm personality and a willingness to get to know people, he has commented that he in turn finds the students of B.C. very friendly and accommodating.

Huang taught the course "Introduction to Chinese History and Culture" in the fall, as well as a Continuing Education class, "Modern China and its Cultural Heritage." Academics, of course, (as every student realizes) is not everything in life, and so with the visiting professor. Though he was a campus-dweller along with the students, he enjoyed taking in such events as the Ice Capades, a symphony concert, and occasional dinners at the homes of fellow faculty members.

He made several good friends in his work at the college, but also said that many faculty, as well as students, are "quite busy." Additional activities enjoyed by Professor Huang are photography, and that familiar pastime, watching television, though as he said, he is not so used to our programs, especially to the quantity of commercials, compared to TV in China.

The professor described his ability to get along with his students favorably, saying he enjoys teaching. In comparing Bethel students in a generalized way with their Chinese counterparts, he remarked that here, students are much less serious, and also not quite as hard-working as those he is used to at home. He doesn't see this as all bad, however, noting that American students seem to know how to have fun, and are often smiling.

Did Mr. Xinqu have to change his lifestyle in moving to Kansas? Yes, somewhat, but his stay was enjoyable and he felt at home. Culture shock had more to do with minor differences, such as the grocery store, where prices are not fixed as they are in China.

A lasting impression of his stay is not a cultural difference such as this, but rather the friendliness and fellowship he encountered while here. "I have been taken good care of and will be loaded with happy memories. I'll never forget the interesting experience I've had at Bethel," was the summation of Huang Xinque as he looked in retrospect at his time as visiting professor.

THE SHEAVES

Bill Lovejoy

The Sheaves

Within a college campus, there are various groups. Clubs, choirs, courses and committees all work toward a stronger identity for an individual. Bethel students, like the separate shafts bundled together, gain meaning in the sheaves.

a bus and 45 people for 15 days

When one is told he or she will be spending spring break, plus another week on a bus, touring from state to state with 45 other people, mixed reactions would definitely follow. But that is exactly what the Bethel College Choir did from March 19 to April 3, as they toured Canada and northwest United States.

Representing just one mixed reaction was Sharla Kaufman, senior, who said, "I didn't really like the idea of giving up my Spring Break, but in the end, it was worth it. Tours like that can provide some of the best college experiences." Mike Shima, senior, added, "I thought the tour would be rather lengthy, but also knew it would be a marvelous way to see the country, meet new friends and old, and to tell people about the college."

The tour did provide an excellent public relations opportunity for Bethel. David Linscheid, assistant director of admissions, accompanied the choir to aid in this area. Choir director Marles Preheim commented, "Dave was an excellent cohort, and fit in well."

According to Tim Wall, junior, one of the longest running jokes of the tour was the mispronunciation of Linscheid's name. Finally, he was just dubbed Dave Windshield by the choir members.

A variety of humorous and positive experiences dominated the tour. Morale was kept high on the trip mainly through choir members' antics. June Unruh, junior, recalled Marilyn Peters as an excellent stewardess mixing air drinks on the Winfield Flight Service. Others mentioned the questionable Aardvark Neutering Service, perhaps an incident only a choir member on the tour could truly understand.

Mike Shima sighted March 27 as a particularly memorable day. It was his birthday and the choir was singing in a church service. That morning the pastor gave a special announcement for Mike which read, "Happy Birthday, from Shortcake and the gang." The special message was from his mother, sister and brothers and preceded the entire congregation's rendition of the "Happy Birthday" song.

Steve Perry, freshman, was known for giving out announcements and awards of his own, some of which are unprintable.

Otherwise the tour consisted of snoozing, eating, game playing, and trying to study. Many remarked that they enjoyed meeting so many host families.

Apparently conversation did not only take place between choir members and hosts, but between the choir members themselves. Kaufman said, "I got to know choir members better. There were some I had never even talked to who are now my closest friends." Preheim also saw the benefit of the group getting to know each other. "The choir does unconsciously become a unit. Thinking together helps you sing together."

a 62-year tradition

Home Economics Club

During the year of 1921 the Home Economics Club was organized. The 1921 Graymaroon lists this as the purpose of the organization: "The Home Economics Club was organized this year for the purpose of stimulating a greater interest in the artistic and scientific aspects of our homes and of helping develop the social life of school."

Over the past 62 years the club has disbanded and reorganized numerous times. The purpose and objectives of the Home Economics Club have changed with the reorganizations.

Dr. Marjorie H. Warta sees that a purpose of Home Ec. Club is to provide leadership: "We need these organizations to develop leadership qualities in today's students. Working together as a group provides skills necessary to participate in society."

Ellen Samuelson and Dr. Warta have worked jointly with the Home Ec. Club as advisors, incorporating educational and leadership experiences as well as social activities into the programs.

This year the Home Economics Club had 15 members. Throughout the school year these members organized programs that increased knowledge in the field of home economics, provided community service, raised money for the club's expenses and provided fellowship among students with similar interests.

The annual monster cookie sale at Fall Fest and the H.E.L.P. (Home Economics Life-saving Program) kits for freshman college students during finals week are fundraisers for the club.

Educational programs were planned to inform the club members of various cultures and life-styles by hosting a special speaker and preparing an international meal. A State Student Workshop that was held in fall gave members an opportunity to explore careers in home economics.

One of the main activities each year is a community service project. These projects service a need in the Bethel or Newton community and also develop good relations on campus and in the community.

The annual hamburger fry in fall, Create-A-Crepe at Christmas and the farewell meeting for graduating members have almost become a tradition for the Home Ec. Club. Through these opportunities of fellowship and teamwork valuable friendships have been made. Perhaps this is one of the most positive aspects of the Home Economics Club at Bethel.

the forensics squad

Although it may come as a shock, there is more to being on the Bethel Forensics team than giving speeches and reading poetry. Being on the nationally ranked sixth-place squad meant being first-class frugal. Big spenders simply did not make the cut, nor did people who enjoy cultural things, like food that doesn't come wrapped in paper or clean sheets.

They didn't complain about this forced cheapness much, but it certainly led the group into some interesting situations that will always be remembered. Take, for instance, the motels in which they have stayed. The Wareham in Manhattan was a good example. The place had everything—winos, a distinct aroma, hot and cold running cockroaches, and color televisions. Theirs was yellow, as was recalled.

Then there was the Wright Motel in Denver, which turned out to be sooooo wrong. . . .

But, the forensic team did more than sleep cheap. They ate cheap, too. Generally, they had breakfast at McDonald's, lunch at McDonald's, and then they stopped at a McDonald's for dinner. On occasion, they tried a Hardee's or a Burger King for variety.

They did, once in awhile, sneak in a good meal. They ate Valentino's pizza in Lincoln, Nebraska, but, like usual, ordered too much of one kind and not enough of another. They ate pizza after their finish at Nationals, but various ones of the group became anti-social and played videogames during most of the meal.

Once they ate crawdads in Lousiana. One sqaud member commented, "It's hard to make a meal of something that looks like it could carry on a conversation with you."

They traveled cheaply as well. They went everywhere by van. It's amazing how much it is possible to dislike someone after riding to Ogden, Utah, and back packed tightly in a Bethel van.

Their vans took them everywhere. This year they went through fog, rain, sleet, snow, and once through the ditch. They certainly get around.

The best example of cheap, though, is the fact that they win dishes and stuff at tournaments and they keep them. For example, Lance Carrithers won a sixth-place plate in Dramatic Interpretation at the American Forensics Association National Individual Events Tournament. That's not bad, being sixth in the nation. Tammy Duvanel won a sixth-place plate for Communication Analysis. Lance took his prose and his poetry to semi-finals, and Gretchen Wells competed at semis level in Dramatic Interpretation. So, for that matter did Jim Schmidt, who did Extemporaneous Speaking. Christy Zeltner was a quarter-finalist in After-Dinner Speaking, and Duvanel competed at this level, too, in Impromptu Speaking.

The year was a good one. Next year should be even better. Watch out, Mac's, 'casue here we come.

The weighty threshing stone has long represented great power and strength. A similar physical strength is a force behind the Bethel athletes. They condition, drill, tone and continue the motion of the threshing.

GAINS RESPECT THRESHER FOOTBALL

You had to look at a lot more than their win-loss record to evaluate the 1982 Bethel football season. The Threshers gained respect around the league far beyond what their 3-6 final tally might indicate.

"I think we surprised a few people," said head coach Kent Rogers. "There's no doubt that we showed a lot of improvement this season."

Win or lose, the Threshers always gave the fans their money's worth, playing one close game after another. Five games were decided by seven points or less. Of these the Threshers won two. All could have gone either way.

The emotional highlight of the season was undoubtedly the McPherson game, in which the Threshers staged one of the most incredible comebacks in the annals of Bethel football. Playing on the road, the Threshers trailed 31-13 with a mere nine minutes remaining but refused to quit, blitzing the Bulldogs for three touchdowns and a 35-31 victory.

The Threshers enjoyed an outstanding offensive year. Junior quarterback Dan Frye rewrote the Bethel record book, setting three game, three season and four career passing marks, including total yards passing. Senior place kicker Nathan Hart established a new career field goal record with 20, and was perfect in extra point attempts in 1982.

Nine Threshers were chosen to all-KCAC teams, including senior Randy McPherson, national NAIA All-American honorable mention, and senior Mike Kauffman, NAIA first team academic All-American.

Other four-year lettermen finishing their Bethel football careers were Lynn Huebert and Ron Reber. Eric Rhoades, who tied for the league lead in interceptions, was chosen the top freshman.

Cherish the past Live for today Dream about tomorrow

For the 1982 volleyball team, dubbed the "1982 Edition" of the Lady Threshers by Coach Diane Flickner, returning to the court after the 1981 team's outstanding performance was no easy task. But the team accepted the challenge and fared well.

The summer was filled with swimming and weight lifting workouts, and dreams of success for the members of the teams. The ladies also assisted Coach Flickner in holding numerous annual volleyball clinics at Bethel and around the area.

Fall brought 6:30 a.m. practices and two-a-days as the team prepared for their toughest pre-season play ever. This included a tournament at Tulsa University with Kansas State and Oral Roberts University. They finished pre-conference with a 12-11 record.

The conference play was a different story. The "1982 Edition" sailed right through all-conference play without losing a single game. This was a new record in Thresher volleyball history.

The end of conference record was 18-0 for matches; 36-0 for games. They were followed by Kansas Wesleyan at 13-5; and Friends University with 11-7. Seniors Lori DeGarmo and Lisa Loeffler were named to the 1982 KCAC All Conference Team. Robin Craig and Brenda Weber, sophomores, were given Honorable Mention.

After completing conference, the "1982 Edition" moved right into NAIA District 10 play at Fort Hays State University. They defeated Benedictine, Pittsburg State, and Friends University in pool play, and returned to a victory over Kansas Wesleyan in regular tournament play.

In the finals of the tournament, however, the ladies lost an exciting 5-game "upset" to Fort Hays, the scores being 8-15, 15-11, 16-14, 10-15, 13-15.

Other honors included Lisa Loeffler and Lori DeGarmo voted NAIA District 10 Volleyball Team. DeGarmo was voted the District's Top All American Nominee, and went on to receive recognition of Honorable Mention on the 1982 NAIA All American Volleyball Team.

As Head Coach, Ken Hartzler, joined the once again solid core of returning players and two newcomers to comprise the 1982 Women's Tennis Team. The veterans include Lori Schultz, at number one singles, Nancy VanHoozier, at number two singles, Carrie Woods, at number three singles, and Kathy Wedel, at number four singles. The newcomers were freshmen Kay Schroeder, and sophomore Amy Schmidt who filled in the number five and six singles positions.

The number one, three, and four singles players were fairly consistent throughout the season, all of whom won 50 percent or more of their matches. Junior, Carrie Woods, was the most consistent player on the team this year winning 70 percent of her singles matches. When asked to comment on this year's conference matches Carrie stated, "Our conference record of 3-2 reflects the team. We lacked experience and confidence. We won the matches that we should have and lost the close ones because of inexperience."

On October 15 and 16 the team traveled to Riverside Tennis Courts in Wichita where they competed in the KCAC Tournament and placed 4th. The top individual finish in the tournament was by junior, Kathy Wedel, who went undefeated in tournament play, and finished first in fourth singles.

Other successful finishes were by the number two and number three doubles teams. The number two doubles team of VanHoozier and Woods won 74 percent of all their doubles matches and placed third in the KCAC Tournament. Amy Schmidt and Kay Schroeder, at third doubles, also placed third.

The entire lineup should be back next year, with some experience under their belts, and should become a stronger, more competent team.

Women's Basketball Team FIGHTERS TO THE END

The 1982-83 women's basketball team started their season with 15 players verbally committed and ended with only seven suited up. They still managed to salvage a 10-14 overall record and a sixth-place finish in the KCAC.

"The girls refused to give up," said second-year coach Dave Deutschendorf. "They never quit; they just kept fighting and overcoming obstacles. It's great to work with people like that."

Beating McPherson by 16 and then Kansas Wesleyan by 22 at home, when "things were clicking," were highlights for Deutschendorf. Other notable moments included an overtime victory at Kansas Wesleyan and a narrow loss to St. Mary's, the eventual District 10 champion.

"I was really pleased to see the girls overcome injuries and youth and develop into the best rebounding team I've ever coached," said Deutschendorf. "We averaged around 40 per game and tallied 52 once, despite our lack of size."

The Threshers lost five or six games by less than five points and several more after twice losing their second leading scorers, Nancy Van Hoosier and Robin Craig.

Individual highlights included the blossoming of unanimous All-KCAC and District 10 freshman selection, Kara Hobbs. She led Bethel in scoring, rebounding, free-throw and field goal percentage, and finished eleventh in the nation for NAIA schools in scoring (21.4) and in free-throw percentage (.830).

Development of junior Penny Burford into a ballhandler and a floor leader, the improved shooting of sophomore Tinese Kroeker and the strong inside game of Marsha Nikkel were also encouraging for Deutschendorf.

It was probably sophomore Robin Craig who summed up the 1982-83 season. Voted Ms. Courageous by her teammates, she overcame various physical problems and became the second leading scorer and rebounder before being sidelined with a broken ankle with three games remaining.

Kroeker was voted Ms. Defense; Hobbs, Ms. Rebounder; and freshman Anne Toews, Ms. Inspirational.

'FRUSTRATION'
THE MEN'S BASKETBALL SEASON

"The one word that describes the 1982-83 men's basketball season is frustration," said second-year head coach Jim Robb, "because of the way we lost the close games and our inability to find a solution to the problem."

Finishing seventh in the KCAC, winning five games, the Threshers struggled through a 5-19 season that seemed to start downhill with a loss to Bethany at home on Dec. 4. A controversial last-second heave by Brian Brashears gave the Swedes a one-point victory.

"We developed a 'snake bitten' attitude after that game," said Robb. "We thought even if we fought hard we couldn't win. A win would have been a real confidence booster for the upcoming KCAC season."

But the cagers did come back from the heartbreaking defeat to enjoy several victorious moments, including two wins over both Ottawa and Sterling, accounting for four KCAC wins.

"The game where we came back from a 17-point half-time deficit to beat Ottawa was definitely a high point," said Robb. "Even in defeat we played well. Nearly beating Southwestern twice, especially our overtime loss down there, was enouraging."

According to Robb, there was much individual improvement particularly in the jayvee program led by assistant coach Rex Hawver.

Behind several last-second victories, the jayvee squad rolled up a 10-8 record highlighted by a one-point win over Panhandle State University of Oklahoma and a 20+ point rout of St. Mary's, both at home.

Other individual improvement was seen in seniors Eric Habegger and Russ Ronnebaum who were named honorable mention All-KCAC. Habegger led the team in rebounding while Ronnebaum earned scoring honors and was invited to play in the District 10 All-Star game. Sophomore James Regier worked his way from jayvee to a starting role and ended up leading the team in both field goal and free-throw percentage.

At the year's end, the entire squad chose Habegger as Most Valuable Player, senior Mark Hill as Most Inspirational and freshman Jim Rudeen as Most Improved.

Soggy Season

Weather proves a challenge

"Through rain, or snow or sleet or hail" may be a common slogan amongst mailmen, but it had to also apply to the 1983 track team as well. Just as the mail is sent in spite of obstacles, the team also delivered an impressive season, sending five people to the national competition in Charleston, West Virginia.

And yet, it only took place after hard work and dedication early in the season. According to Connie Regier, "The greatest challenge was the weather. The weather proved discouraging throughout the season, but I felt by the end of the season we were running fairly well."

And "fairly well" was hardly even the word for it. In the KCAC meet, a season highlight both for the men and the women, they had an excellent showing. Placing in the men's division was Tim Conrad with a second placing in the discus and the hammer. In the high jump, Eric Unrau finished second as well.

Top placing in the women's division included a first place finishing for Marcia Nickel in the high jump, along with a third placing in the 100 meter hurdles. The relay team finished second in the 400 meter relay and the 1600 meter relay. In the 400 meter dash Deb Regier's time was good enough for a first and Connie Regier came in at a close second. Andrea Schmidt won top honors in the 800 meter run. In the 200 meter dash the Regier sisters switched places, Connie had the first placing and Deb had the second place title.

Naturally following the KCAC meet, was the District 10 competition in McPherson. Bethel took third in that tournament following Ft. Hays State and Bethany.

According to Coach George Rogers, the meet was an especially good one for Conrad. "Tim had a super day in both events. He will have an excellent chance at a placing in West Virginia.

Conrad finishing first in the discus and second in the hammer. Eric Unrau's high jump was good enough for second. George Leary's hammer throw placed sixth. Chuck Voth took fourth in long jump.

The women did every bit as well, placing first in the 400 meter relay, and 1600 meter relay. In the 400 meter dash Bethel dominated as well. Schmidt placed first, Deb Regier second, Connie Regier third, and Carmen Goering sixth. Connie Regier was the first place finisher in the 200 meter dash and sister Deb Regier finished third.

Connie Regier summed up the season in this way, "The highlight of the track season was when Coach Rogers gave us the chance to run at Nationals in West Virginia. The competition and the experiences we had there are ones we will never forget."

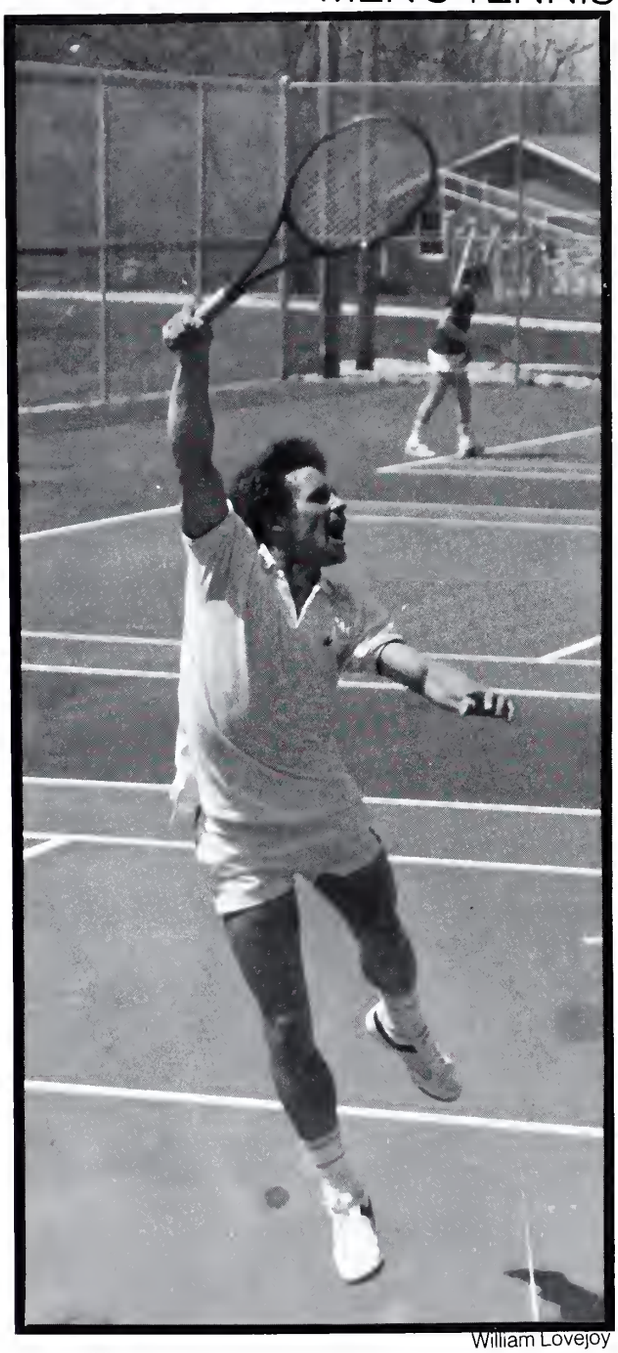
Team Effort Nets Second in KCAC



William Lovejoy

Early in the men's tennis season, number one singles, Kevin Lehr stated, "Our goals as a team are to win the conference and get a chance at nationals." Although only barely falling short of that goal, the outstanding season gave no cause for complaints.

After competing against a variety of teams including Tulsa University, Kansas State University, Cowley County, and other area competition, the team placed second in the KCAC.

That honor was bestowed only after a lot of hard work from those on the 1983 team. They included Lehr, Todd Esau, Wendall Funk, Tom Craven, Marvin Kym, and David Weaver.

Although the team finished second behind Bethany, Lehr came through with a placing of first in number one singles competition. Lehr, along with Esau finished second in doubles, at the tournament.

The KCAC placing allowed the team to advance to the District 10 Tournament held in Wichita. In singles, Lehr won the first round over Kossover, but fell after two tough sets, 6-4, and 7-2 in the finals.

"Skill wise, Kevin was equal to any other player there, but tennis is a game requiring a whole lot of momentum to win, and Kevin just seemed to lack it somewhat on that particular day," was Coach Paul Thiessen's comment.

Doubles competition proved to be similar with Lehr and Esau defeating Fort Hays 6-2, and 6-3, but falling to Baker in the finals, 6-3, 2-6, and 6-2.

According to Thiessen, the game shifted momentum during the match. "The teams were equally skilled. Baker simply took control in the final set."

According to Esau, "Everybody has really pulled with each other this season. It was a team effort to get where we did."

Thiessen agreed, "The team did an excellent job, I am very proud of their efforts."

Women's soccer club new, but holding their own

The well-known phrase goes, "Anything you can do, I can do better," and the newly formed Bethel College Women's Soccer team is no exception. Although not necessarily doing better, they are definitely holding their own along with the already established men's team.

The women's team was formed this year due to a basic interest on campus. The women had either participated on the men's team, or were active spectators in the preceding years. Doris Dyck commented, "I've been going to the men's games ever since I came to Bethel, and it looked like so much fun, I wanted to play too." Later she added, "In the past, women have played on the men's team, but I knew there was enough interest on campus for a separate women's team."

Others cited different reasons for joining the team. Gretta Hiebert explained, "I've always admired soccer players for their agility and stamina. I wanted to try it myself in the company of other rank beginners." Barbara Nessler chose to participate because of the group interaction the sport would involve. "The club gives the opportunity to exercise in a group, without taking a class or participating in one of the varsity sports."

According to Alaine Peaslee-Hinshaw, she encouraged the Bethel women to start a soccer program for themselves because of a positive experience with a team she had been on while attending a college in Wisconsin. All the women seemed to agree, the program was not going to go unless they did it themselves.

They are glad they did. Alice Deckert was enthusiastic about the benefits of the program. "It's a good way to meet people and it's excellent physical exercise as well." Susan Samson added, "I like picking out a skill and developing it. I also especially enjoy the teamwork."

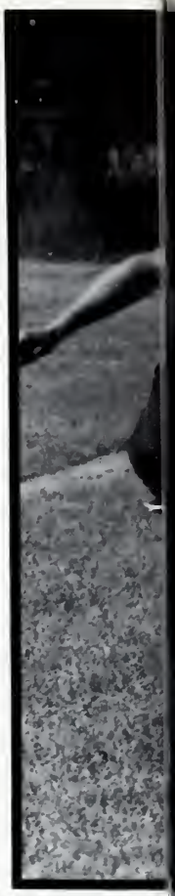
Team effort seems to be what the program is all about. Dyck was referring to teamwork when she said, "In this game, you can't go anywhere by yourself, not even if you're really good, it's when we mediocre players work together that it all begins to happen."

As one can see, the rewards of the program are many, the less favorable aspects are few. The only complaints the women had included battling the weather, finding adequate practice time, and of course the hours it takes to get into condition. Heidi Regier commented, "I tend to feel less in shape than is necessary. But for me the 'pain' of really exerting physically always has to be overcome psychologically before I'll really enjoy the practice and the games." Nessler added, "My least favorite aspect is conditioning as well, but I see the necessity of being in good shape."

And Coach Christopher Hinshaw helps them do just that. Each of the participants gave nothing but praise to their leader. "Chris is a wonderful coach," commented Hiebert. "He has lots of concrete advice on strategy and training." Dyck also said, "He's been nothing but enthusiastic. Yes, he pushed us, but we'd get 'nowhere' without that."

The women's soccer team is definitely "somewhere" and they plan to continue to progress. Peaslee-Hinshaw expressed the possibility of joining a Wichita Women's League next fall. Deckert added, "We're all interested in seeing women's soccer continue, and I believe we will all work to keep it here for a long time."

Gail Decker



MEN'S SOCCER always exciting

As the Soccer Club kicked around the idea of becoming a varsity sport they completed a successful fall season compiling a 5-3 record. Coach Paul Thiessen has been working on getting some new, young soccer players out on the field, to replace some of the more traditional members, in a transition that may lead the club into becoming a team.

Coach Thiessen recognized the growing numbers of enthusiastic fans and the new soccer field as factors in this year becoming one of the most exciting seasons ever. "Every year we seem to get more and more fans and this year continued that tradition," commented Thiessen, who added, "Moving from a practice field filled with hammer and shot put holes to one of the best fields in Central Kansas, helped make this season an exciting one."

After, literally, getting faced by Hesston College midway into the season Thiessen stated that the club, "Realized that there was a different style of play" from what they had been playing. After Hesston they became a new club, going for the play, passing off more, playing more like a "team," rather than a conglomeration of students, faculty, and community people who meet a few times a week to carry on an unorganized practice.

The spring season offered a different type of organization to the team. They had a community leadership, with no one person given the title of "coach." Because of this, the team reverted to its old style of play, finishing the spring season with no wins.

Regardless of whether or not the Soccer Club becomes a Soccer Team with a single coach, the club can always be looked toward for excitement.

The Market

The market is an essential part of life. The farmer will exchange wheat for needed goods. Here, the Bethel students exchange support with businessmen, churches and parents.

Old Mill Restaurant

Yesterday and today have joined hands in Newton at the Old Mill Restaurant built on the site of the old Warkentin Flour Mill ... Pots of yellow mums march along a black bakers rack. Used bricks and mellow wood blend with sleek steel and copper to form a setting for dining at its finest. Whether it's a simple mushroom burger and a spinach salad, or Veal Oscar and Black Forest torte, you'll enjoy dining at the Old Mill.

Waitress enjoys employees Dislikes troublesome customers

Cindy Goertzen managed to successfully combine school and her job as a waitress at the Usual Place. Goertzen discovered being a waitress can be challenging. She commented, "Sometimes it's hard to keep up with everyone's needs and that gets very tiresome." According to Goertzen, the most difficult part is "to smile and be nice to the customers even when they're hassling you about something." When asked what she liked best about working at the Usual Place, she replied, "Definitely the people I work with. If I weren't around people I could have fun with, I don't think I'd last long at the job."

Student Works Her Way Through College

To earn money for her college education, Pat Warders accepted a job at Alco five years ago. Since then, she has worked in almost every department, including beauty aids, school supplies, housewares, and sporting goods. Her current duties are doing office work including bookkeeping and being at the service desk or check-out stand. While she is at the service desk, Warders does entertaining tasks such as giving out refunds, hearing complaints, and handing out rain checks. Warders feels her job at Alco has been "a good way to work yourself through school."

INTERN GAINS EXPERIENCE

Suzanne Dirks, an economics and business major, gained experience while working during the Spring semester as an accounting intern with Haury, Boston, and Steely. Since it was tax season, her main responsibility was to check the mathematical computations on tax returns prepared by the accountants. Her favorite part of the job was doing bookkeeping for some of the firm's clients. Dirks commented, "The people I worked with made the job interesting." Once they had a drawing for a radio that came in the mail. They held a basketball pool during the NCAA tournament. Some clients sent candy and flowers to the office. Dirks enjoyed the job and added, "It was a nice change of pace from sitting in the classroom every afternoon."

Manager does 'nothing really'

Murray Penner was well-known to many Bethel students for giving them specials, 8 for $1, at Arcadia. Penner worked as a manager at Arcadia from September until the place closed in April. He described the job as "doing nothing really, just sitting there making change." To pass the time, he studied while on the job. Penner stated, "Since I worked full-time, I would not have been able to work at any other job and still go to school." One incident gave him an opportunity to use knowledge learned in social work classes, his major. A small child who seemed neglected came to Arcadia every day. Penner became concerned and reported him to an SRS agency. He did find time to practice his skills at Robotron and several other video games, however.

END OF THE TRAIL—Bethel's class of 1983 takes their final step from Academia.

William Lovejoy

Like the wheat that continues its life cycle, Bethel students will continue to follow their cycle of growth, distinction, meaning, transformation and giving.

A Note From The Editor

In past years the THRESHER has been majorly pictoral. This year's book was designed to offer a creative insight through both written and visual communication.

Since this new style of annual was adopted for the 1982/1983 college year, the contributing authors were very important. The following individuals should be recognized for their features in "The Ripening" section.

Student Nursing	Gail Decker
Nonregistration	Carmen Epp
Readers Theatre	Gail Decker
Interterm on Campus	Sandy Nickel
Student Teachers	Gail Decker
Man of La Mancha	Gail Decker/Sandy Nickel
Antigone	Gail Decker/Sandy Nickel
SCAN	Jonie Trued
The One Acts	Carmen Epp
The Consul	Sandy Nickel
Social Work Field Placement	Jonie Trued
Seniors and Awards	Sandy Nickel

I personally would like to thank Bryan Reber, Jonie Trued, Scott Jost, Alice Deckert, Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Goertzen of United Printing Inc., and Write Type Inc. for their extra help in the production of the 1983 THRESHER.
